

THE BARRE DAILY TIMES

FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1910.

Entered at the post office at Barre as second-class matter.

Published every week-day afternoon. Subscriptions: One year, $3.00; one month, 25 cents; single copy, 1 cent.

Frank E. Langley, Publisher.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

5,605

Those New York Highlanders are having quite a fling in Boston.

No doubt Crippen would like to send out the wireless distress signal.

Montpelier continues to put an almost prohibitive price on cleanliness.

It is taking a lot of time to count one of the smallest states, Vermont.

The Canadian public is demanding arbitration of the Grand Trunk strike. The worm will turn.

Now that post office thieves have taken to the use of automobiles, the inspectors will have to go them one better with the use of aeroplanes.

When he described Taft as "the greatest living Ohioan," Nicholas Longworth perhaps felt the father-in-law eye and went no further than the bounds of Ohio for his comparison.

The Hardwick & Woodbury railroad hasn't adopted the new style of relating yet, according to Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty. And it may be remarked that the R. & W. looks just as well in the old style.

The Pilgrims landed on the shores of Massachusetts from the Mayflower; and President Taft repeated history yesterday, when he stepped off the Mayflower. Now let's look for the Society of Those Who Saw Taft Land from the Mayflower.

Governor Draper of Massachusetts seems to have washed his hands of a very disagreeable duty, when he temporarily relinquished the governorship to Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham just when the Rivet execution was due to come, with all its attendant hysteria. But Lieut.-Gov. Frothingham is meeting the situation courageously, it seems, with a desire to do what is right in the matter.

AN AGE LIMIT FOR MOTORISTS.

New York has a new state law regarding the regulations of automobiles, one feature of which is worth copying. According to the interpretation of the Callan law by the attorney general of New York, no one under the age of 18 years will be permitted to operate an automobile, the prohibition coming, of course, in the granting of operators' licenses. It is said that many accidents in the nature of running down pedestrians have taken place solely because the automobile has been given to the children of the rich as a plaything, and the children, not realizing the dangers connected with the machine, have run wild with their new acquisitions. "Some of the cases have been particularly outrageous," says the New York Evening Sun, "and the legislature had plain facts to go on in making the prohibition." Therefore, the interpretation of the law which fixes the age of 18 as the lowest limit. The age is reasonable enough, too. Children under that period in life are too immature in judgment to be permitted the use of automobiles on the public thoroughfares; and the example set by New York state is so good that it should be followed by others.

THE LIQUOR PLANK.

In contrast to the halting attitude taken by the Republicans of Vermont as a whole toward the liquor question is the clear-cut, unequivocal position by the Republicans of Bennington county, as taken in their convention yesterday. The latter are not doing a circus balancing feat on the top rail of a shaking fence, but they stand squarely for their convictions, which are that the present local option law justifies its retention for eight years and that it should not be the football of the coming legislature. On the same subject, the Republican convention of Vermont at Montpelier put out a jumble of sidestepping words, declaring that the Republicans desire "the most salutary laws vigorously administered," and following that up with a leap to the dark by asserting that the principle of local option should not be abolished without recourse to a referendum, since it was by a referendum that the present law was established. By no interpretation can it be determined by the plank just referred to whether the Republicans of Vermont stand in favor of local option, prohibition, the town agency system, the Norwegian system, or just plain rum. They said they wanted the most salutary law and that it be carried out vigorously, which is a most splendid generality and in keeping with the platitudes which are oftentimes put out as a sop to certain elements. Who doesn't want the most salutary law? And who doesn't want to see its strict enforcement? Would that the Vermont Republicans had told us!

On the referendum question, too, the state convention is on the fence, not knowing whether to ask for a referendum or to oppose it, merely stating weakly that the present law should only be wiped out, if ever, by the agency which brought it into being. If the Republicans of the state hoped to please all factions in their party by such equivocal statements of belief, they have pleased nobody and have only made themselves a laughing-stock. He said to the credit of the original framers of the platform that the halting assertion finally adopted by the convention was not their work but was about the only thing that was revised from the original draft. The contrast between it and the liquor plank of the Republican party of Bennington county is so striking that The Times commends the man-fashion attitude of the latter.

Current Comment

"The Seat of Marshall."

John Jay and Hughes, the first and the last—for the time being—chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, should the president make the designation for the present vacancy which everybody seems to expect. But how queer it would be! Jay resigned that office, after serving only a few years, to become governor of New York. Hughes would be resigning the office of governor of New York, after serving a few years, to become chief justice of the United States. What does this contrast mean? Mainly, that while New York has grown beyond the wildest dreams of its founders our great court has grown in prestige and honor still faster. Imagine a man laying down a place on that tribunal to-day to become chief justice of the supreme court of South Carolina, and yet that is what Rutledge Jay's successor, did, when Washington offered to make him its chief. Ellsworth, the next man in line, resigned after four years of service. In line, nobody seemed to realize that it was a great court until John Marshall, mightiest of the chief justices, made it so. "The seat of Marshall" is a wholly proper characterization of the office for which Governor Hughes is presumably under consideration.—Boston Transcript.

Woman's Hip Broken by Man Fleeing from Officers During Raid.

That a policeman is needed on upper Barre street there is no question. Last Saturday night, as Mrs. Joseph St. Rock was returning home, she was run into and knocked down by a man who was running, her hip being broken so that she was unable to walk and passengers on an electric car helped her aboard and took her home, the man not stopping to see how badly the woman was injured. It is thought that he was one of those implicated in the raid going on at that time on Barre street, and was fleeing from the officers. No physician could be found to attend Mrs. St. Rock until the next day. Residents of that street are unanimous in feeling that an officer is needed there if in any place in the city.

William Finn, the young son and Mr. and Mrs. James C. Finn of the Worcester road, had a fainting spell yesterday in front of the Perley E. Pope store and had to be carried home.

Work on the city hall is progressing well, the weather being suited to work every day upon the structure. The plastering on the first floor is nearly completed and all that remains to be done
